

CALL CONGRESS: Save the Postal Service, Reverse Mail Delays, and Pass $25 Billion in Emergency Pandemic Relief

The COVID-19 pandemic is threatening the United States Postal Service. A sharp decline in revenue means the Post Office could run out of money, threatening the essential service postal workers proudly provide the country.

The new Postmaster General, Louis DeJoy, has instituted harmful policies causing serious delays of mail. These cuts undermine the public's confidence – currently 91% of the public approve of USPS – in the Postal Service and drive away business.

In order to #SavethePostOffice, we need everyone to demand their member of Congress:

- ✓ Pass $25 billion in emergency COVID funding for the USPS.
- ✓ Permanently reverse delays.

DeJoy has announced he would temporarily "suspend" the policy changes that are delaying the mail. We will hold his – and our elected leaders' – feet to the fire to protect the People's Post Office.

Let's keep up the massive wave of support for our public Postal Service. Postal workers are absolutely dedicated to providing prompt reliable and efficient postal services to the country through the pandemic, through the election and beyond. They must have the support to continue their vital mission.
